

Anoles are small lizards that change color to match their surroundings. Anoles defend their home area from other lizards. Male anoles bob their heads and extend a bright red flap of skin under their necks as a warning to all intruding males. With the use of special toe pads, anoles climb trees in search of insects and spiders.